I began using e-mail on a regular basis in the early 1990s. It started out as an occasional way to send a message to a few colleagues. Now I check my e-mail several times a day. It has become a part of my daily routine.

Standard-Examiner

I am always surprised to read that people are still worried about the scam. With the internet being so transparent, it is hard to believe that anyone would fall for such a scheme.

John Worley. Worley is a decorated Vietnam veteran. He holds a Ph.D. in psychology, and he is an retired military officer. For most of his 62 years, he has been using e-mail to communicate with his colleagues and clients.

As a result of the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam, Worley lost almost $600,000. In February of this year, he was convicted on bank fraud and money laundering charges. It seems that the Nigerian scam, which Worley and others fell for, was not as straightforward as it seemed.

Net equality, neutrality

The Senate Commerce Committee is likely to approve an Internet bill, called the Communications Opportunity, Promotional and Enhancement Act of 2006, to the Senate for a vote on Tuesday.

Challenges

Why did the American people allow the flag to be degraded and defiled? Simply put: The Supreme Court passed a decision in 1989 that allowed for the flag to be used in political campaigns.

Net neutrality

The Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, upheld a rule that prevents broadband Internet service providers from offering preferential treatment to specific websites or customers.

In this regard, the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam has grown in popularity. With the Nigerian scam, for example, the promise of $45 million to the United States is very important. But the Nigerian scam has so far failed to take root in the United States.

To use e-mail, you know that junk e-mail, or “spam,” is a big part of the problem. The New Yorker magazine details the experience of Mark Worley, a former U.S. diplomat in Vietnam. He holds a Ph.D. in psychology, and he is a retired military officer. For most of his 62 years, he has been using e-mail to communicate with his colleagues and clients.

As a result of the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam, Worley lost almost $600,000. In February of this year, he was convicted on bank fraud and money laundering charges. It seems that the Nigerian scam, which Worley and others fell for, was not as straightforward as it seemed.

Net equality, neutrality

The Senate Commerce Committee is likely to approve an Internet bill, called the Communications Opportunity, Promotional and Enhancement Act of 2006, to the Senate for a vote on Tuesday.

Challenges

Why did the American people allow the flag to be degraded and defiled? Simply put: The Supreme Court passed a decision in 1989 that allowed for the flag to be used in political campaigns.

Net neutrality

The Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, upheld a rule that prevents broadband Internet service providers from offering preferential treatment to specific websites or customers.

In this regard, the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam has grown in popularity. With the Nigerian scam, for example, the promise of $45 million to the United States is very important. But the Nigerian scam has so far failed to take root in the United States.

To use e-mail, you know that junk e-mail, or “spam,” is a big part of the problem. The New Yorker magazine details the experience of Mark Worley, a former U.S. diplomat in Vietnam. He holds a Ph.D. in psychology, and he is a retired military officer. For most of his 62 years, he has been using e-mail to communicate with his colleagues and clients.

As a result of the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam, Worley lost almost $600,000. In February of this year, he was convicted on bank fraud and money laundering charges. It seems that the Nigerian scam, which Worley and others fell for, was not as straightforward as it seemed.

Net equality, neutrality

The Senate Commerce Committee is likely to approve an Internet bill, called the Communications Opportunity, Promotional and Enhancement Act of 2006, to the Senate for a vote on Tuesday.

Challenges

Why did the American people allow the flag to be degraded and defiled? Simply put: The Supreme Court passed a decision in 1989 that allowed for the flag to be used in political campaigns.

Net neutrality

The Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, upheld a rule that prevents broadband Internet service providers from offering preferential treatment to specific websites or customers.

In this regard, the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam has grown in popularity. With the Nigerian scam, for example, the promise of $45 million to the United States is very important. But the Nigerian scam has so far failed to take root in the United States.

To use e-mail, you know that junk e-mail, or “spam,” is a big part of the problem. The New Yorker magazine details the experience of Mark Worley, a former U.S. diplomat in Vietnam. He holds a Ph.D. in psychology, and he is a retired military officer. For most of his 62 years, he has been using e-mail to communicate with his colleagues and clients.

As a result of the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam, Worley lost almost $600,000. In February of this year, he was convicted on bank fraud and money laundering charges. It seems that the Nigerian scam, which Worley and others fell for, was not as straightforward as it seemed.

Net equality, neutrality

The Senate Commerce Committee is likely to approve an Internet bill, called the Communications Opportunity, Promotional and Enhancement Act of 2006, to the Senate for a vote on Tuesday.

Challenges

Why did the American people allow the flag to be degraded and defiled? Simply put: The Supreme Court passed a decision in 1989 that allowed for the flag to be used in political campaigns.

Net neutrality

The Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, upheld a rule that prevents broadband Internet service providers from offering preferential treatment to specific websites or customers.

In this regard, the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam has grown in popularity. With the Nigerian scam, for example, the promise of $45 million to the United States is very important. But the Nigerian scam has so far failed to take root in the United States.

To use e-mail, you know that junk e-mail, or “spam,” is a big part of the problem. The New Yorker magazine details the experience of Mark Worley, a former U.S. diplomat in Vietnam. He holds a Ph.D. in psychology, and he is a retired military officer. For most of his 62 years, he has been using e-mail to communicate with his colleagues and clients.

As a result of the Nigerian Money Laundering Scam, Worley lost almost $600,000. In February of this year, he was convicted on bank fraud and money laundering charges. It seems that the Nigerian scam, which Worley and others fell for, was not as straightforward as it seemed.