Any rescheduled test (early or late) may be subject to a point deduction, depending upon circumstances & at my discretion. A test that has been scored & returned to the class cannot be rescheduled or made up & will count zero. The time & date for the Final will be announced. No rescheduling of the Final so plan ahead now to be there or score zero on that test.

Mark only True (X) & leave false statements blank () for true/false questions. Failure to follow test instructions can result in point deduction.

You are also personally responsible for the consequences of your choices, including the grade you will earn & receive in the course as a result of your choices. It is highly recommended that you review an Introductory Psychology text (chapters on learning & memory) prior to beginning this course. You must attend class for a person-to-person lecture-discussion of material; no email, podcasts, text messaging, etc. will be done during the course to substitute for the in-class discussions.
