Text: Goldstein, E. B. Sensation & Perception, Thomson-Wadsworth, 2007

Comment: Review the chapters on the nervous system, neuron, synaptic transmission, & the brain, and the chapter on sensation & perception in any standard Introductory Psychology text. It is assumed & expected that you have mastered that material prior to enrolling in this upper-division course. Failure to complete this self-study review may impair your ability to understand the assigned text & lecture material, and may adversely affect your test scores and semester grade (see Free Choice Policy, below). You must also read assigned material before attending lecture-discussion of that material in order to fully understand the lecture-discussion, and to be prepared with questions if you have any.

Assigned reading, lecture, & test schedule (may change as announced in class!);

*Tests will be given in the social science testing center during a limited time period between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. If you absolutely must reschedule a test, you must contact me in person prior to the test for permission. Any rescheduled test, early or late, may be assessed a point deduction depending upon circumstances and at my discretion. A test that has been scored & returned cannot be rescheduled or made up and will count zero. **Test #4 may be given the last class day, or be part of the Final exam (time & date tbd: _____). No rescheduling of the final—plan ahead now or score zero on that exam!

Grading: A = 91-100%, A- = 90%; B+ = 89%, B = 81-88%, B- = 80%; C+ = 79%, C = 70-78%; C- = 50-69%; D = 0-49%.

Free choice policy: You have personal freedom to register for, attend, participate, ask questions, read assigned material, & take tests, or not, & are personally responsible for your choices & the consequences of your choices.
