

Hello again from the Geosciences Department! We hope you find these weekly emails informative and helpful. Please feel welcome to reply back to this newsletter, or contact the person(s) listed as contact for more information, with any questions that you may have.

Send in Your Spring Break Photos: Just a reminder to send in your geoscience-related spring break photos (or even other shots taken during spring or last fall semester). Send them via an email, or stop by the department office any time with a flash drive. We hope to feature your pictures in future issues of our newsletter.

Undergraduate Researchers to Hit the Road: Four Geosciences majors will be traveling to present their undergraduate research projects at a number of exciting conferences:

WSU Undergraduate Research Symposium (March 25): Tabitha Berghout, Amand Genty, Julianne Lemmon, & Sara Yearsley will be present -- try to attend this event and support our majors.

National Conference on Undergraduate Research \(NCUR\) (April 11-13): Julianne Lemmon will present at the University of Wisconsin--La Crosse

Utah Academy of Sciences, Arts, and Letters (April 12); Tabitha Berghout will present at Utah Valley University.

GSA Rocky Mountain Section Meeting (May 15-17): Amanda Gentry, Julianne Lemmon, & Sara Yearsley will present at Western State University--Colorado.

Weekly Newsletter Now on Website: You can now find these weekly email newsletters on the website at <http://weber.edu/geosciences/Newsletters.html>. Current information is visible in an embedded, scrolling document and is also available through a pdf link along with all previous issues.

The Basic Physics of Climate Change: Dr. Brad Carroll, WSU Physics, will present the seminar "The Basic Physics of Climate Change." Wednesday, March 20, 2013, 1:30 PM - 2:20 PM in LL 121. Light refreshments will be served. The attached PDF has details of this presentation. For more information, please contact Dr. Carroll at bcarroll@weber.edu or (801) 626-7921.

Dining for Dollars to Support WSU Students: On Thursday, April 11th, Sonora Grill will donate 100% fo all sales to the Weber State University Foundation in support of first generation or low-income students. In addition, an anonymous donor will also match Sonora Grill's gift...up to $25,000! Please see the attached flyer for more information. Reservations are encouraged.
