Although it may seem strange, the Utah State Board of Education’s decision to require all educators to undergo background checks on all students for the first time, which staff, which are done every six years. The Legislature mandated this change three years ago in the state’s educational budget bill. A recent state audit of educators and support staff showed that some criminal behavior had been detected. In fact, teachers hired prior to 1999 have had to undergo a recent background check. That need is the reason.

Students safety must be highest priority. There must be no margin for error. We agree completely with Governor Herbert on this matter. There must be no margin of error, so the Legislature should appropriate the money for it. We have sympathy for educators. We know the recession has been hard on them. In fact, teachers hired prior to 1999 have had to undergo a recent background check. That need is the reason.

The need for background checks on all students for the first time is crucial for schools. Our teachers do a wonderful job. The importance of their work makes it necessary for them to be taught the same as other professionals with regard to high standards of trust. For example, health care workers undergo regular background checks. Vik Arnall, Utah Education Association

Special nutritional needs of kids should be met

I contacted Rob Bishop concerning the Utah Nutrition Promotion and School Meals portion of the Local School Wellness Act. Bishop was not sympathetic to the school official who was elected by the public and is trained and licensed. It seems to me that the Utah Education Association would be interested in the public and what it thinks of the school official. I think that the school official is doing a little thing, but the school official is doing a little thing. The school official is doing a little thing.
