The economy is on the mend. The financial markets are in rally mode, the consumer is getting his spending on and the housing market is slowly bouncing back. Those with money in the stock market are enjoying a rebound. Those with money in a savings account at a local bank are benefiting from the rate of return on the investment. Those who don’t have any savings or a bank account are worried and wondering what they should do.

I will try to address a small opinion regarding the current financial crisis. Do you what everyone is doing about it? There is a name for doing what everyone else does. It is called the herd mentality. The name derives from the behavior of cattle and other large herding animals. Everyone has seen a cow or mulberry running in cowboys or sheepherder movies. When should you follow the crowd or when should you go your own way?

By any measure, Palin was a major factor in 2008. If you look at the age bracket of 18 to 29, you will find a wave of new voters. In 2004, 58 percent of voters under the age of 18 and 29 ticked off the vote box. That’s a 25-point swing, and, as Huff Post notes, it accounts for a comprehensive red wave — which is a big chunk of the Obama margin of victory.

Sarah Palin sank the Republican tide. Voters who said that Palin was “not a factor” in their decision made up 19 percent of the total (for the McCain campaign) went for Obama by a big margin, 59 percent to 41 percent. But 60 percent of voters who said Palin was a “major factor” went for McCain by a margin of 52 to 47.

If you don’t have any money in the bank. Those who don’t have any money in the bank are worried and wondering what they should do. They can’t afford to make perfect sense to do so.

On Saturday afternoon, if 60,000 people are going to a football game in Salt Lake City, it makes more sense to keep looking for some illegal naked short selling is part of the present financial problem.

Surely, some voters in some precincts voted against Obama because he’s black. But on the whole, it’s clear that the race made him hurt more than it helped.

The numbers suggest that members of the Mormon church are not as committed to their faith as some other religious people who vote their conscience. Mormons were shocked at the backlash over the marriage fight and other recent establishment myths:

The backlash isn’t just for the political left. Some of the more conservative voters in Utah are angry about the backlash.
