

NOMINATION FOR NCFR HONOR STUDENT RECOGNITION

The National Council on Family Relations (NCFR) wishes to acknowledge the outstanding accomplishments and academic success of family science students. By recognizing exceptional scholarship, leadership and service in graduating undergraduate and graduate students, NCFR wishes to honor worthy recipients for their excellence and encourage and empower them to continue to excel in and make contributions to the field of family science. Nomination can be via self-nomination, college/university faculty member or department chair, or via another person (employer).

ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA:

1. Honor student recognition in NCFR is an honor awarded to student members of NCFR, both undergraduate and graduate, who have made outstanding and enduring contributions to the field of the family science in the areas of Scholarship (3.0 Cumulative and 3.5 Major GPA or higher), Leadership, and Community Service.
2. The applicants must have completed at least 30 credits in family specific coursework.
3. The Nominee must be a member of NCFR at the time of nomination.
