What is a DNP?

The Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) is a practice-focused degree designed to prepare nurse leaders at the highest level of nursing practice to improve patient outcomes and translate research into practice. The program builds upon master's programs by providing an educational foundation in quality improvement, evidence-based practice and systems leadership, among others.

For over 65 years, Weber State University's Annie Taylor Dee School of Nursing has developed highly skilled and knowledgeable nursing professionals. The Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) prepares you to advance to the next level of your nursing career.

Why Earn Your DNP at WSU?

- Ability to work while pursuing your DNP degree
- Comprehensive online orientation
- 100% online course work with one on-campus meeting to disseminate the DNP project
- DNP Project completed within your community or place of employment
- Designed for registered nurses who have earned an MSN or for BSN prepared nurses who have earned a master's degree in public health, health administration, or business administration
- Faculty with broad experiences in nursing practice, research, scholarship, leadership, quality improvement, policy and systems approaches to healthcare

What You'll Learn?

You will gain advanced practice nursing knowledge and skills to prepare you to become a leader in the nursing profession and an expert in your field of nursing practice.

DNP Contributions

DNP-prepared nurses have the skills to facilitate any form of nursing intervention that influences healthcare outcomes for individuals or populations at the organization/systems level. The DNP nurse assumes advanced leadership roles advocating for, developing, and implementing healthcare delivery changes at the systems level. The DNP nurse develops and implements local and national healthcare policies, promotes standards of patient care and safety, uses information technology to affect change and critically analyzes and applies current research.
