Instruction uses both synchronous and asynchronous technology. Synchronous means students will meet at set times/days to receive instruction via videoconferencing such as Zoom. Asynchronous means instruction and assignments will also be delivered via Canvas or other technology not tied to set meeting times/days. At least 20% of course content will be asynchronous.

| Instruction is a mix of in-person and technology-assisted, which may include synchronous virtual and/or asynchronous online instruction. Synchronous means students will meet at set times/days to receive instruction via videoconferencing such as Zoom. Asynchronous means students will use Canvas or other technology not tied to set meeting times/days. Details will be found in the course's section notes in the registration system and communicated by email prior to the semester's start. Check your Weber email for more information. Instruction uses both synchronous and asynchronous technology. Synchronous means students will meet at set times/days to receive instruction via videoconferencing such as Zoom. Asynchronous means instruction and assignments will also be delivered via Canvas or other technology not tied to set meeting times/days. At least 20% of course content will be asynchronous.

| Full Semester Instruction is a mix of in-person and technology-assisted, which may include synchronous virtual and/or asynchronous online instruction. Synchronous means students will meet at set times/days to receive instruction via videoconferencing such as Zoom. Asynchronous means students will use Canvas or other technology not tied to set meeting times/days. Details will be found in the course's section notes in the registration system and communicated by email prior to the semester's start. Check your Weber email for more information. | Instruction uses both synchronous and asynchronous technology. Synchronous means students will meet at set times/days to receive instruction via videoconferencing such as Zoom. Asynchronous means instruction and assignments will also be delivered via Canvas or other technology not tied to set meeting times/days. At least 20% of course content will be asynchronous. |      |   |                                                             |             |     |        |               |

ESS 3510: CRN 30139 and 30140

Important for Spring 2021: This is a FLEX course, which will be using a combination of online lecture delivery and face-to-face/virtual lab. All weekly lectures will be pre-recorded and posted on Canvas for you to view at any time (i.e. asynchronous online weekly lectures). The laboratory component of this course will be delivered at the designated course time through Zoom with face-to-face participants. A volunteer will report to the lab during assigned lab time while the rest of the class joins via Zoom to assist with data collection and interpretation. All participants are required to wear a mask during laboratory activities. This is done in an effort to comply with social distancing and keep you all safe. This means you will ONLY attend face-to-face labs if you volunteer to be the participant. On the days that you are not to attend, stream the lab live on Zoom (link will be provided on Weekly Overviews in Canvas).

Read your syllabus for COVID-19 policies and procedures. Per WSU policy, it is mandatory to wear masks in all buildings and this includes WI112. If you do not wear a mask in class you will be asked to leave.

ESS 3600 Course CRN 30141:

Important for Fall 2020: This is a FLEX course, which will be using a combination of online lecture delivery and face-to-face supplemental instruction. All weekly lectures will be pre-recorded and posted on Canvas for you to view at any time (i.e. asynchronous online weekly lectures). The face-to-face component will consist of optional supplemental instruction (i.e. question and answer, practice problems) to be provided in WI112. In an effort to comply with social distancing and keep you all safe, only half of the class will attend each day of Supplemental Instruction. This means you will ONLY attend face-to-face on your day assigned (Tuesdays or Thursdays). On the days that you are not to attend (or if you are unable to attend in person at all), stream the supplemental instruction live on Zoom (link will be provided on Weekly Overviews in Canvas).

Read your syllabus for COVID-19 policies and procedures. Per WSU policy, it is mandatory to wear masks in all buildings and this includes W1112. If you do not wear a mask in class you will be asked to leave.

Due to multiple labs offered, waitlists cannot be accommodated. This lab course will be taught via "FLEX" meaning it will be both Synchronous and Asynchronous teaching methods. Synchronous means students will meet at set times/days to receive instruction via videoconferencing such as Zoom. Asynchronous means students will use Canvas or other technology not tied to set meeting times/days. During the semester, the students will complete a guided research project, comprising in-person and synchronous virtual lab sessions. In-person lab sessions will be: 1/26, 2/2, 2/9, 2/16, and 2/23. All other lab days will have synchronous lab activities on Tuesday between 1:30-4:20 pm.

|           |   | This course serves as a foundation to a pre-service science teacher's education coursework. This course is cross-listed with Botany, Chemistry, Earth and Environmental, Physics, and Zoology. This course is taught VIRTUAL HYBRID. It is delivered ALL virtually with 0% face-to-face. All students are expected to attend VIRTUALLY on the days the class is scheduled.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |             |     |       |                 |

|           |   | This course will be taught face-to-face in a classroom. Social distancing will be in effect and no exceptions over the maximum enrollment will be granted. Course time will be spent with one day of lecture, one day of practice in the computer lab, and one day of structured research inquiry from a dataset. Students are expected to spend time outside of class analyzing and researching each week. This bioinformatics course explores solutions to biological questions that can only be provided by information technologies. Students will learn the basic concepts, methods, and tools used in bioinformatics. Course activities will include DNA alignment and assembly, gene prediction, functional genomics, phylogenetics, protein structure prediction, protein folding, protein-protein interaction, metagenomics, and next-generation sequencing analysis. Students will also experience simple programming language approaches such as Python or R to automate the use of bioinformatics tools and interpret their output. Our objective is to provide basic competency in bioinformatics so that in their own research students can solve problems using these advanced tools. Students should have prior knowledge of college algebra (logarithms, exponents, factorials, sets) and the basic molecular biology of genes (DNA, RNA, proteins). |             |     |       |                 |

Instruction is a mix of in-person and technology-assisted, which may include synchronous virtual and/or asynchronous online instruction. Synchronous means students will meet at set times/days to receive instruction via videoconferencing such as Zoom. Asynchronous means students will use Canvas or other technology not tied to set meeting times/days. Details will be found in the course's section notes in the registration system and communicated by email prior to the semester's start. Check your Weber email for more information. Contact the instructor with questions.

| This is a face-to-face class that will be taught with Zoom simulcast, so if students are higher risk, need to quarantine, etc., they may continue to participate in the class in real time on Zoom. The class will meet face-to-face every MWF. |   |                                                               |             |     |       |               |

Instruction uses both synchronous and asynchronous technology. Synchronous means students will meet at set times/days to receive instruction via videoconferencing such as Zoom. Asynchronous means instruction and assignments will also be delivered via Canvas or other technology not tied to set meeting times/days. At least 20% of course content will be asynchronous.
