Title: Intelligence Studies: Secrets, Policies and Issues -The purpose of the U.S. intelligence community (IC) is to produce finished intelligence to assist policymakers in dealing with foreign state and non-state actors, who actively seek to hide their plans, activities, intentions, motivations, and goals from the U.S. government. In other words, intelligence, as the backbone of U.S. national security, prevents policymakers from "flying blind." Despite its importance, intelligence remains, unfortunately, one of the least taught courses in U.S. colleges and universities. As a result of this knowledge deficit, misunderstandings and tension tend to arise between transient intelligence consumers (elected officials) and the intelligence community. This course is intended to fill the gap by providing future leaders in government (at local,
