Health Promotion Program Review
Dean's Response

Appreciation is given for all of the work that has gone into this program review. Thanks to the Health Promotion faculty for putting the Self-Study document together, the review team for reviewing the printed materials, for taking the time to meet with faculty, staff and students on campus, and for summarizing their findings for the program faculty. The feedback given by the review team members will be very helpful as the Health Promotion faculty continue their ongoing efforts towards program renewal and enhancement.

The site review team identified 19 commendations stating that HPP had a thoroughly articulated mission, and that course activities helped students to develop professional skills linked to national standards. It was also noted that staff and faculty were program strengths. The program curriculum will maintain alignment to national standards (i.e., those endorsed by the National Commission for Health Education Credentialing-NCHEC) for the field of health education/promotion.

The review team also identified 21 recommendations. As mentioned in the program director's response, all recommendations for improvement by the team are either under consideration; many with action plans already in place, or appropriate responses will be considered and acted upon by the department faculty over the course of the next 2 years.

The Jerry and Vickie Moyes College of Education is strongly committed to the ongoing support of the Department of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, and the Health Promotion Program, faculty, staff, and students.

Again, thanks to all who have contributed to this program evaluation and congratulations to the faculty, staff, and chair of the Department of Health Promotion Human Performance (Health, Physical Education, and Recreation as of July 2019) for all the great work they do, and to Christina Aguilar, Chris Eisenbarth, Yan Huang, Heather Hunter, and Michael Olpin for their outstanding dedication to the Health Promotion Program and their students.
