If you have friends or family who are at risk of experiencing an opioid (heroin or pain pill) overdose, you should consider obtaining naloxone to enable you to reverse an opioid overdose.

Naloxone, also referred to by the brand name Narcan, is an opioid overdose reversal drug. Naloxone works on overdoses caused by heroin or other opioids (prescription pills) like fentanyl, morphine, oxycodone, hydrocodone, and methodone.

REMEMBER:

If you rescue someone with naloxone, always call 9-1-1.

DID YOU KNOW?

Naloxone only works on opioid overdoses. It will not help or hurt someone if it is administered in the case of an overdose of a different drug.
