10 Things UndocuAlly Educators Should Know

Start Here

VISIT
Get involved in spaces that welcome Daca/Undocumented students. Check out the Office of Access & Diversity, Student Services Center, Suite 150.

EMBRACE TRANSPARENCY
Openly state you support undocumented students through your organization’s marketing material. Use your office space to display artwork regarding immigrant rights and/or the UPE placard.

Serve the Students

PUT THE STUDENTS FIRST
Support their growth and development.

BUILD TRUST
Don’t pressure disclosure. Be patient. A student chooses who and when to disclose their status to.

DON’T STEREOTYPE
There is great diversity within immigrant narratives. Don’t assume everyone has the same story.

KNOW YOUR CAMPUS
Be aware of campus and community resources to refer students to. Take time to get familiarized with campus resources and your colleagues, so that a student is not bounced from one department to another.

Make yourself a resource

CRITICALLY REVIEW POLICIES
Review the procedures and policies, research jobs, scholarships and other funding that are open to all students, regardless of their immigration status.

STAY INFORMED
Attend workshops, training and/or events to keep updated on relevant information.

PERSONALIZE YOUR APPROACH
Find ways the best ways to serve Daca/Undocumented students. Your techniques will vary among each role on campus.

Go Beyond

BE AN ADVOCATE
Leverage your allyship by being active in the immigrant rights movement.
